

● BAMBORA

Made by Parents. Loved by Parents.

Hey Mama! Welcome to the Bambora family

I would so love to have you with us. Our Bambora Sling Carrier was made by parents for parents, and there is genuinely a lot of love in it. 150,000 mamas around the world are wearing one right now, and we would be honoured to have you show it to the world in your own way.

Inside you will find what the product is, and a few of the videos that have worked best for us. Please treat them as somewhere to start rather than something to copy.

Once you are onboarded I will add you to our Discord, where I drop fresh inspiration, new angles and materials every week, so you never run out of ideas.

THE PRODUCT

What you are sharing

The essentials, so you always know what is true when you talk about it on camera.

10 to 50 lbs
Always the weight, never an age.

Buckle and safety loop
Buckle over the clip, loop threaded.

Padded shoulder strap
Takes the weight off arms and wrists.

Adjustable both sides
Either shoulder, either hip.

Packs down small
Folds into a bag, no bulky frame.

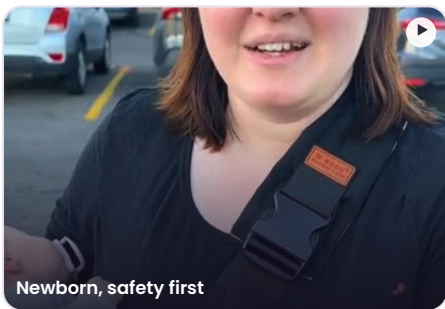

Lots of prints
New colourways drop regularly.

 Creative freedom. Everything here is a reference, not a script. The ads that perform best for us are always the ones with the creator's own touch on them. That is not a nice thing to say, it is what the spend data shows. So please, make it yours.

WHAT IT IS

A mama with her seven week old, talking through how the sling takes the weight while she supports the head.

WHY IT WORKED

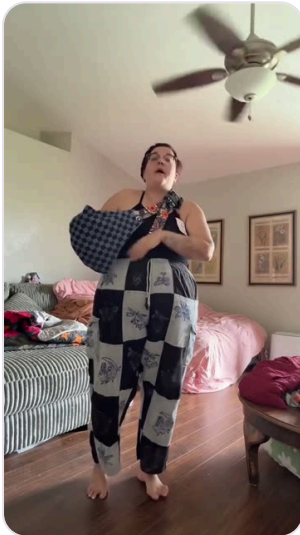

Without being asked she says she keeps a hand on baby for safety reasons, and it still feels completely natural, never stiff.

✓ BUILD ON THIS

If you ever wonder what safe but still warm sounds like, it sounds like this one.

Talking

Plus-size

WHAT IT IS

She explains why a traditional ring sling is a faff, then walks through the padded strap, the clips and the safety buckles.

WHY IT WORKED

Length is no barrier when the information is useful. She also speaks to plus-size mamas, which almost nobody else does.

✓ BUILD ON THIS

Teaching something. If you know a thing other parents do not, that is your video.

Outdoors

WHAT IT IS

A dad walking his toddler around the garden, showing her the flowers. Three words of text and that is the whole video.

WHY IT WORKED

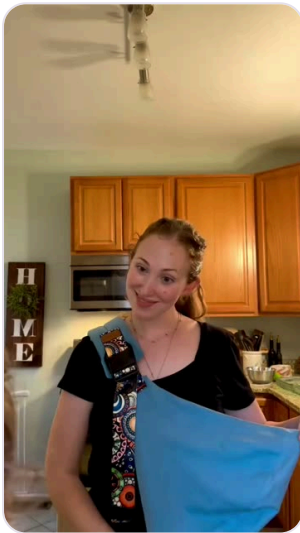

Dad content is rarer, it stops the scroll, and it widens who sees themselves in us.

✓ BUILD ON THIS

If there is a dad or grandparent in your life who would wear it, film them. No script needed.

Text story

No dialogue

WHAT IT IS

A little story told entirely in captions. A bored toddler staring at the floor, then up in the sling seeing the world.

WHY IT WORKED

A real emotional payoff with no talking at all. The toddler's point of view is an angle nobody else is using.

✓ BUILD ON THIS

The problem-then-solution arc told in text over real footage. Lovely if you are shy on camera.

✗ ONE THING TO CHANGE

It shows a hands-free moment. Keep one hand on baby and the story still works perfectly.

Interview

Grandparent

WHAT IT IS

Someone off camera asks granddad why he prefers it, and he just talks about making eye contact with his grandson.

WHY IT WORKED

Handing the question to someone else and letting them answer is the least ad-like format we have.

✓ BUILD ON THIS

The interview format. Ask someone in your family and just film their answer.

✗ ONE THING TO CHANGE

He says “no hands”, which we no longer say, and quotes an age range. Ours is 10 to 50 pounds.

Out and about

WHAT IT IS

Minnie ears, a toddler on the hip, walking the park. The whole thing is over in eight seconds.

WHY IT WORKED

Specificity. Not “it is comfy” but “I was in lines all day at Disney”. A named situation beats a general benefit.

✓ BUILD ON THIS

Pick one very particular moment in your week and build the whole video around it.

✗ ONE THING TO CHANGE

She is filming a selfie with one hand and the other is not on baby. Prop your phone, or ask someone to film you.

Genuinely, message me any time.

About a video, an idea, a shot you are not sure about, or nothing in particular at all. I would so much rather talk something through with you than have you guess.

I cannot wait to see what you make.
